

Young America in Parsing.

Teacher—Parse man.
 P.—Man is a common noun of the masculine gender.
 T.—What's that, sir?
 P.—Man is a common noun of the feminine gender; common, 'cause he can be bought cheap; and feminine gender, 'cause he's always got woman on the brain; 8th person, 'cause his wife and six children come first—is in the objective case, and generally governed by a woman.
 T.—Go to your seat, sir, and put a wet rag on your head.
 P.—Next, parse woman.
 P.—Woman is a female noun of the masculine gender.
 T.—Mercy on us, what did you say, sir?
 P.—She's a female noun of the masculine gender, 'cause she wears the breech-aloers, and is determined to vote; she's compounded of cotton, wholestones, sunshine, starch, smiles and thunder clouds; is in the first person, 'cause she's always the person speaking; plural number, 'cause she makes more noise than a half dozen parrots; is in the objective case, and governed by the fashions.
 T.—Sit down, sir, and rinse your mouth with phrophylactic fluid.
 P.—Next, parse boy.
 P.—Boy is an uncommon noun of the masculine gender, and female persuasion.
 T.—Thunder and blackjacks! what is that sir?
 P.—Boy is an uncommon noun of the masculine gender and female persuasion; uncommon, 'cause he's hard to find; masculine gender, 'cause he soon enters the threshold of gooshead, female persuasion, 'cause he's always got the heart sick about some female; first person big like, singular number, 'cause he's no body but himself, in the objective case, and governed by his embryo mustache, Schiedam Schnapps, and the length of his daddy's purse.
 T.—Go home, sir, and bathe your feet in mustard.
 T.—Next, parse girl.
 P.—Girl is an angelic noun, of the Grecian bend gender, and masculine tendencies.
 T.—Save us from sudden death. Those boys will never be raised. How is that, sir?
 P.—Girl is an angelic noun, 'cause she paints her cheeks and loves injuns; she's compounded of cosmetics, flowers, furs and feathers; is of masculine tendencies, 'cause she wears shirt bosoms, paper collars, and always has her head full of boys; singular number, 'cause the boys are afraid of them, and matrimony has played out; third person, 'cause she's much spoken of; in the objective case and governed by a gypsy bonnet.
 T.—Next, parse corn.
 P.—Corn is an uncommon noun of the neuter gender.
 T.—Bless my life! Go on, sir.
 P.—Corn is an uncommon noun, 'cause farmers have well nigh quit raising it; it is used as an adjective, and belongs to Tennessee, Ohio and Kentucky. When parsed as a noun it is in the objective case and governed by cotton.
 T.—Sit down, sir.
 P.—Next, parse cotton.
 P.—Cotton is a royal noun of the starving gender.
 T.—Listen at that.
 P.—Royal, 'cause it's king; but only over the Southern people. Starving gender, 'cause it has well nigh starved out the South; in the objective case, and governed by lazy freedmen.
 T.—Next, parse fashion.
 P.—Fashion is a tyrannical noun of the common gender.
 T.—Catfish and blunderbusses!—What is that, sir?
 P.—Fashion is a tyrannical noun, 'cause it must be obeyed, and laughs at a poor man's purse; common gender, 'cause all people bow to it; it is compounded of flounces, flimsies, ruffles, bubbles, troubles, ruffs, cuffs, souffls, giggles, giggles, curls, furls, hair, snarers, Grecian bend, luss and feathers. It was once in the objective case, and governed by Eugenia, but is now in the nominative case, independent.
 T.—Go home, sir, and go to bed.
 T.—Next, parse baby.
 P.—Baby is an obstreperous musical noun of the neuter gender.
 T.—Moses and the prophets, save us from destruction! What do you say, you little imp?
 P.—Baby is a musical noun, 'cause it sings a soft tune between midnight and day, especially of a cold night; it is neuter gender, 'cause it's neither male nor female until it's big enough to wear breeches. Is compounded of milk and lungs, grows at a rapid rate, and soon learns to smoke cigars, drink spirits, talk short to dad, and make love to the gals. It's also of spoilt gender, 'cause it's allowed to put its feet in the gravy whenever it chooses. Is in the objective case and governed by candy and sugar plums.

 T.—Go home, sir, and tell your mother to rock you to sleep.
 T.—Parse matrimony.
 T.—Matrimony is an ancient noun of the defunct gender.
 T.—Hear him! You little vagabond, what do you say?
 P.—Matrimony is of the defunct gender, 'cause it's played out. Girls are plentiful as blackberries, but they've got nothing; they toil not, neither do they spin, yet Solomon in all his glory could not dress like 'em. Matrimony is compounded of the words mate and money. Third person, 'cause it's spoken of much by the gals. In the objective case and governed by the spondulicks of the gal's daddy.
 T.—Take a seat sir, and rub your head with a brick.
 T.—Parse kissing.
 P.—Kissing is a common labial noun of the explosive gender.
 T.—Sakes alive! What do you mean, you little devil?
 P.—Kissing is of the explosive gender, because it is usually attended with various explosive sounds, sometimes like the bursting of a torpedo, sometimes like unto weeping, for Jacob kissed Rachel and she lifted up her voice and wept. It is common because it is popular to all sizes and sexes and ages, especially young girls, preachers and widows. Kissing is derived from bussing, and is of various kinds. 1st, there is rebuss, which is bussing again. 2nd, there is omnibus, which is bussing all the girls in the room. 3rd, there is blunderbuss, which is one man kissing another man's wife. 4th, there is syllabus, which is one girl kissing another girl, where so many boys are spoiling for a buss. It is second person, 'cause it takes two persons to perform the operation; plural number, because they generally take more than one when they get a chance; is in the objective case, and governed by surrounding circumstances.
 Just here the teacher and vast audience broke down. A bevy of red headed girls rushed upon the rostrum and demanded that the little imps be hung instant, if not sooner, and order was not restored till the Marshall assured them that all the reproaches should be hung at sunrise next morning. The teacher was carried off on a window shutter.
 The Penn Monthly for October contains an interesting article on "The English Bible and its Revision." It fears the new bible will be introduced but slowly.
 "When the revision is at last ready for publication it will probably be disposed of to a number of American publishers the bible society will hardly take it up until it has secured the sanction of its own constituents in general. Even very recently that great publishing corporation was discussing the propriety of again canvassing the country, to see that every family that reads English is supplied with a copy, the unrevised version. What decision was reached we do not know; but such plans do not promise a very speedy adoption of the revised version. Perhaps its adoption will come first from the ecclesiastical bodies. If the Episcopal general convention, the Presbyterian general assembly, the Lutheran general council and synods, the two Reformed general synods, the Methodist general conference and the national conference of the Congregational churches, will unite in the adoption of the revised version, it will come into general use as a matter of course. But in nearly all of these there will be warm discussion and difference of opinion. The conservative and the timid will urge the old objections as to, the unsettling of men's faith and the promotion of skepticism; single versions of texts will be fastened on as specially objectionable to the principles or feelings of this or that church, and it will be found that not every one is pleased with the change. But the solid good sense of American Protestants will sooner or later prevail, and the dread of a new potential schism among us—the dread that has kept a majority of the Baptists out of the bible union—will be felt with overwhelming force.
